

Hawks to play Tonnos for a shot at avenging overtime loss

wake up call," said Conacher, a teammate of Loyola goalie Emily Robinson's on the Provincial Women's Hockey League's Burlington Barracudas. "We knew it wasn't going to be easy with their goalie. We know how strong of a goalie she is and we were going to have to crash the net."

Feeling as though it had nothing to lose, Nelson stormed the Loyola end — and got a bit of a break to boot when Katie Hubert's shot hit a stick and went over Robinson's head and dropped into the net behind her just 22 seconds into the third. A minute and 14 seconds later Lauren Blair's slapper from the right circle tied the game.

"We were a little in shock, but we knew there was a lot of time left," Favretto said.

Loyola very nearly regained the lead just as quickly as it disappeared when a rebound came to Zeismann at the edge of the crease. She banged it toward the seemingly open net but Nelson goalie Jenna Hague reached across to make the save.

At the other end, Robinson denied Conacher, kicking out her pad to deny the Nelson sniper after she'd taken a drop pass in the slot.

But Nelson would get the winner four minutes into the extra period. Conacher, breaking in one-on-one on the left side, fired a bullet that Robinson got a piece of with her blocker but it still caught the top corner of the net.

Despite the loss, McNamara said he is proud of his team.

"Any time a team hasn't lost all year, there's lots of pressure on it not to lose," he said. "Unfortunately, it happens all the time."

Loyola won't have to carry that burden Monday. And if they can beat Bishop Tonnos, the Hawks will get another chance to play their Halton rivals for a berth at the Ontario Federation of School Athletic Associations tournament on Wednesday.
