The Royal Edinburgh Military Tattoo

The Royal Edinburgh Military Tattoo is an extravagant military demonstration, complete with bagpipes, drums, marching and more, across the esplanade of Edinburgh Castle. The word "tattoo" is derived from the Dutch term for "close the beer tap", referring to a regiment's music playing to signal pub owners to stop serving so soldiers would return home for a good night's rest. Today, this ritual has turned into a festival that attracts hundreds of thousands of visitors every year. This year's event is centred around the theme, the "Year of Natural Scotland," highlighting the country's exquisite natural beauty. Participants this year include the 90-strong Brazilian Marine Corps Martial Band, Bavaria's German Mountain Army Band and a unique Dutch Bicycle Band, in addition to Scotland's performers.
